The Making of a Reserve

Ebey's Reserve is the very first national historical reserve, created by the US Congress in 1978. Unlike traditional parks, the Reserve is a living, working community just like yours. Most of the land in the Reserve is privately owned, but you will also find wonderful state & community parks and trails that are open to the public. Enjoy yourself!

The Town of Coupeville, Island County, Washington State Parks, and the National Park Service all work together to protect the special places you see in the Reserve. The Ebey's Landing emblem is a symbol of their partnership.

When have you done something with other people that you could not have done alone?

Coupeville's Front Street

Front Street in Coupeville was the center of commerce on Whidbey Island for many years. Many of the original buildings still stand but have changed owners and purposes over the years.

Some of the historic storefronts on Front Street display brass date plaques. Take a walk to find those historic buildings; then write down what businesses operate in them now.

Coastal Salish People

The Coastal Salish people called “Skagit” [SKAD-jit] lived on Whidbey Island in the heart of present-day Ebey’s Reserve for 10,000 years. Penn Cove was home to at least three permanent villages. One of them was called Bah-TSAHD-zah-lee, or ‘snake place’. This is the area of present-day Coupeville.

The Skagit and their neighbors fished and harvested shellfish from Penn Cove and the surrounding waters of the Salish Sea. In nearby prairies and forests they hunted game and fowl, and they collected plants such as berries and camas bulbs. Here nature supported the largest native population in the region.

If you were a Salish person on Central Whidbey, 500 years ago, what else would you need to survive?

What Helped Make the Prairies?

Glaciers had a heavy impact in forming the prairies you see today. Long ago, the entire Reserve was covered in ice over a mile deep.

Match the glacial term and definition with the drawing.

Glacial erratic: a boulder transported and deposited by a glacier having a different source than the bedrock upon which it is sitting.

Kettle: A depression left in a mass of glacial drift, formed by the melting of an isolated block of glacial ice.

Moraine: accumulated earth and stones pushed and deposited by a glacier.

Till: unsorted clay, sand, gravel and boulders deposited by a glacier within moraines.

Look around Ebey's Landing National Historical Reserve for a giant glacial erratic.

(Hint—one is located near South Main Street)

Hedgerows

Hedgerows begin when birds rest on a fence and leave behind plants seeds they ate earlier. Hedges are great habitat for small animals, birds and insects. They slow down water runoff after rain and help keep soil from being blown away by wind.

Life's full of Hedges in the Reserve—

-but we all find our way through them!

Habitats within the Reserve

Plants and Animals live in a variety of different habitats within the Reserve.

Draw a picture of each habitat.

The Race for Empire in the Pacific Northwest

In 1792, when George Washington was president of the United States, the kings of both England and Spain sent explorers to chart and claim the Pacific Northwest. Britain's Captain Vancouver and Spain's Bodega y Quadra could have gone to war, but instead they worked together to chart the Salish Sea for the benefit of all.

The Settlers Arrive

A pioneer's prospective on his life

Olympia, Oregon
April 25, 1851

My dear brother—

I scarcely know how I shall write or what I shall write... The great desire of [my] heart is, and has been, to get my own and father's family to this country. I think it would be a great move. I have always thought so...

Col. Isaac N. Ebey, for whom Ebey's Landing National

To the north down along Admiralty Inlet (that portion of water connecting Puget Sound with the Straits of Juan de Fuca) the cultivating land is generally found confined to the valleys of streams with the exception of Whidby's Island (the large island that blocks up and terminates the Straits of Fuca on the east) which is almost a paradise of nature.

I have taken my claim on it and am now living on the same in order to avail myself of the provisions of the Donation law. If Rebecca, the children, and you all were here, I could live and die here content.

—Isaac N. Ebey

Getting around Whidbey Island

Transportation has played a major role in development on Whidbey Island.

Match the mode of transportation with the time it was typically used.

What kind of transportation did you use to get here?

Alexander Blockhouse

At one time, there were over a dozen blockhouses in Central Whidbey. Today only four remain. The Jacob Ebey Blockhouse and the Davis Blockhouse are both located near the Sunnyside Cemetery and the Crockett Blockhouse is on Fort Casey Road.

Follow the numbers to connect the dots.

Where is the Alexander Blockhouse located?

Why do you think people built blockhouses?
